Dr. Walker came out against his own wishes and interests, because he had been persuaded to do so by members of the party who had no more to do with others who are talked of as constituting a "clique" than the man in the moon. Those who persuaded him did so under the impression that he could do good service in the Legislature. Even after his name had been brought forward, he would willingly, nay system. gladly, have given place to any other good Democrat, who could be elected and would consent to serve.-It was due to him that, if others wanted some other person, he should have known it, so as to act accordingly. To allow a man to stay in the field, against his own interests and wishes, and then slay him, without notice, cannot be otherwise than wrong, and nobody, on reflection and examination, can fail to admit it. Everybody knows that, even according to the strictest party usage, any candidate had as much right to be brought forward as Dr. Walker, and nobody have a word to say against it-but every man has a right to fair notice and fair treatment .- Daily FF PEAL OF EITHER OF THESE LAWS Journal 20th inst.

We presume that it is conceded that this county should be present in the persons of her strongest and ablest citizens-those most fully conversant with such matters, as also, to borrow a phrase from Charles Sumner, men of "back-bone" who can do, as well as talk. Of the importance of this matter, we presume there can be no doubt and little difference of opinion, nor that this place has a deep stake in the direction to be given to the future improvements of the State, which the propos ed convention will probably have considerable influence in shaping.

The absence of many of our most active business men has very properly deferred any action until their return, or until, at least, as late a day as possible before the meeting of the Convention, but we would suggest that a meeting for the appointment of delegates cannot be postponed beyond the coming week, and deposited them there for safe keeping. A call from the Magistrate of Police of the town of the proceeding of the Salisbury Convention to memorialize the coming Legislature-and that body is the representative of Counties in all cases. Besides, the interests of the town and County are mutual, and it is proper that their people should move together.

We cannot see that participation in the deliberaaffect our relations with the people of Charlotte, arising out of the July Convention at that place; and at any rate, the people of most of the counties represented at Charlotte will also be represented at Salisbury, including those of Mecklenburg herself.

The Faris correspondent of the Independence Belge, published at Brussels, mentions a rumor of a joint note, addressed, or to be addressed, to the Cabinet at Washington, by the French and English governments requiring explanations in regard to the engagement said to have been entered into between the United States and Russia, especially with reference to the acquisition, by the United States, of the Russian possessions on the Pacific. The Paris Presse also gives currency to a similar rumor. We take it for granted that they can demand, and that the United States will refuse, and that will be about the whole of it.

Little did the world at large know of the tenderness, affectionateness, and sympathising susceptibilities, "which leaped like angels from his heart," for his companionships were never with the multitude. By the friends, however, who came within the circle of his affections, his virtues will ever be remembered, and sacredly enshrined in the sanctuary of their souls. In all the progress of his life, he was the object of their love; and when he came to die, they rejoiced to know that he sought and found the solace of that religion, which imparted a brightor lustre to his character, and even amid the agonies of earth gave him a sweet foretaste of Heaven. With the unreserved profession of the Christian's faith, he gave to all around him the cheering assurance that he enjoyed the Christian's hope-"that hope which travels through, nor quits us when we die Thus he lived, and thus he died. Long may the example of his life and death be remembered; and may He who has on Turnbull; the property of David Johnson, and the plan promised to be "a husband to the widow and a father to the tation and adjoining tracts on which he now resides. His former temple is in ruinsthe blight and decay of death rest upon all that was mortal of him now, but his spirit, seeking its higher destiny, has gone, robed in righteouness, from this discordant world, to live in undying glory, amid the hallowed harmonies of Heaven.-Com.
